

KAMARON

Kamaro'an

Inspired by Taiwanese indigenous culture, Kamaro'an explores natural materials and delicate craftsmanship through simplistic designs.

We believe in both creativity and precision that hands can bring to life.

The name Kamaro'an originates from Pangcah, an indigenous language which means "the place to live."

Our concept is to provide culturally-related employments in Hualien to attract youths to come home.

Each of our products is crafted by the local indigenous weavers.

Umbrella Sedge Series

Umbrella Sedge Series

The umbrella sedges can only grow in clean water, and it takes four to six months to harvest them. It is a traditional plant material in the coastal indigenous woven culture. As craftsman Sumi Dongi removes the skin of the sedge stem, she tries to avoid mildew problems, hence making the mats more delicate in nature.

By collaborating with Sumi Dongi, we weave umbrella sedges on structural metal frames to create lightings and stationery with modern forms. This allows the crafts to be produced in small-scale systems.

Woven Series

Woven Series

The rattan peel that is pliable but strong was once the best weaving material in the indigenous culture. The one thread weaving makes the knot unbreakable and is commonly used in tightening stone pestles.

Kamaro'an and the indigenous weaving craftsman Rara Dongi use genuine tanned leather that has the same material characteristic as the rattan peel to do the one thread weaving. We develop structural leather cutting, bringing the weavings new functions and revealing its original beauty.

Kamaro'an at Home Hotel

Following the ancient Pangcah wisdom of living in harmony with the earth, the shapes of mountain and ocean are hidden in Kamaro'an. The Kamaro'an room presents by Home Hotel Da-an, invites traveler to immerse themselves in the world of umbrella sedge, driftwood and weaving originated from eastern Taiwan.
